keys 5d ed out of the faq and it adds a little icon with the names of the above mentioned roads and a little green circle next to it which has a similar border as the one i dont know the reason for that i dont think it represents a road. This is a guide to the four lanes of consciousness. For the most part, the meaning of the 1st and 3rd lane is obviously obvious but the 2nd lane can be a bit more complicated. Nevertheless, although the 2nd lane is the easiest to work with, it is also the most complicated so it takes a little time to comprehend. In the 2nd lane, we identify with our body, the most commonly used part of our life, the one we are familiar with, and rarely think about it. It is the part that automatically responds to our thoughts and emotions, and makes decisions based on a set of rules, based on input from the first two lanes. In the 2nd lane, we are ruled by reason, and emotional actions such as fear, anxiety, anger, jealousy, or excitement, are all to be repressed. We are blind to our actions in this manner. The 4th lane is the most positive of the four, and the last one we work with before going to sleep. In the 4th lane, we are not ruled by the body, which is in the 3rd lane, nor are we ruled by reason, in the 2nd lane, but by emotion. In the 4th lane, we are totally without rule or restriction. There are no laws or consequences from our past or present. In the 4th lane, we become totally dependent on others. We have no self-esteem, and are completely dependent on others. In the 4th lane, we are ruled by the heart, and that is where we are in love. In the 4th lane, we feel happy, loving, and appreciative. When we are not happy, we feel anxious, not because of a real danger, but because of our thinking about our life. When we are upset or angry, we don't know the reason, and we are not able to communicate to the 3rd lane. In the 4th lane, we become very emotional. There is no reason to be angry, and most likely we are not going to be, so we should be happy. We are acting emotionally, 82157476af
